LISBON REVOLT CRISIS.

NORTHERN AREA ISOLATED.

350 CASUALTIES IN CAPITAL.

Madrid, Aug. 27.
General Carmona, the Dictator of Portugal, is still facing a critical situation, though telephone news from Lisbon states that the further outbreak last night was quickly suppressed and that quiet has now been restored in the capital.
As a result of the further fighting, the death-roll has mounted to fifty, while over three hundred people are wounded and in hospital.
The northern districts have been isolated and a strict censorship has been into operation. It is believed that skirmishes are occurring with the rebels, who are fleeing northward.
It is, however, thought that General Carmona has the situation in hand and that the new revolution has been squelched.
It is the twenty-third to occur in Portugal since the little country expelled King Manuel some 21 years ago.
General Carmona continues his dictatorship on the most absolute scale, after repeated promises to restore to the country some semblance of Parliamentary constitutionalism.
Feeling is strongest in Oporto and the country districts, though there is a strongly anti-Carmona section in the capital.
The situation in the northern districts is believed to be serious for the Government, though strong measures are being taken to quell the uprising.—Reuter and N.E.A.

Zeppelin's Discovery in Arctic.

What Camera's Eye Saw.

Clue to Fate of Amundsen.

PLANE IN SNOW.

Berlin, Aug. 26.
Hope was extended here to-day that the veil of mystery which for several years has cloaked the fate of the late Captain Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian Arctic and Antarctic explorer, will be lifted.
The mystery of Amundsen's fate may be solved as a result of last month's flight of the Graf Zeppelin over the Arctic regions.
Professor Paul Molchanoff, the Russian meteorologist, who was aboard the Graf Zeppelin when the spectacular flight into the Arctic was made, to-day developed photographic plates which he had exposed while the Graf Zeppelin was flying over the southern reaches of Nova Zembla.
The photographs reveal that in the snow on the ground directly beneath the Graf Zeppelin there was an aeroplane which the human eye, subject to snow blindness, was not able to detect.
Professor Molchanoff believes that the aeroplane shown in his precious photograph may be the one in which Amundsen set off from Tromsø. In search of General Umberto Nobile and the stranded men from the wrecked Italian polar dirigible, the Italia.
Investigation Planned.
It is possible that the plane is that of other lost aviators or it may have belonged to Soviet reconnaissance. But the theory that the aeroplane may be the clue to the fate of Amundsen will be thoroughly investigated.
Since, in 1927, Amundsen hopped off with a companion from Tromsø in search of General Nobile, who was later rescued, there has been no indication of his fate.
Nobile Now Searching.
General Nobile, now stripped of his honours by the Italian Government, has been spending the summer cruising in the Arctic aboard the Soviet ice-breaker Malygin in search of traces of Amundsen.
When Amundsen went in search of General Nobile they were enemies. They had disagreed over the credit for the flight over the top of the world in the polar dirigible, the Norge.

LABOUR PARTY'S REMARKABLE MANIFESTO.

Fierce Attack on Banking Interests.

APPEAL TO MASSES FOR SUPPORT.

"CONSTRUCTIVE EFFORT FOR A NEW SOCIAL ORDER."

CABINET'S ACTIVITIES.

A REMARKABLE MANIFESTO issued by the Labour Party and signed by Mr. Arthur Henderson, who has stepped into the leadership, suggests that the effect of the collapse of the Labour Government and the establishment of the National Government under Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, has been to cause a violent swing of the Party to the Left.
The MacDonald Government is accused of the intention to attack the standard of living of the workers in order to meet a situation caused by the policy of the private banks. The bankers are inferentially accused of a deliberate plot to bring about the collapse of the late Government, which was setting a bad example from a financier's viewpoint in taxing the rich to provide for the necessities of the poor.

Co-operation With Government.

NOTED VISITORS.

Geneva, Aug. 27.
In pursuance of the plan of co-operation between the Chinese Government and the League of Nations for the development of the country's health and educational organisations, among other things, Dr. Rajchman, the Director of the Health Section of the League, accompanied by Mr. Walters, the personal assistant of the Secretary-General, Sir Eric Drummond, is now on his way to China.
Four educational experts are leaving for China on Monday aboard the famous German Transatlantic liner Bremen.
They are Dr. C. H. Becker, the former Prussian Minister of Education, Professor Paul Langevin, of the College de France, who is an eminent physicist, Professor R. H. Footpads Meet their Match.

GRIM FIGHT NEAR DOGS' HOME.

High courage was displayed last night by Mr. Ling Kwansau, manager of the Industrial and Commercial Oil Refinery, of 14, Queen's Road Central, when he fought four armed footpads and emerged triumphant.
With Mr. Tang Pak-wai, treasurer of the firm, he was attacked at about 6 o'clock last evening, soon after alighting from a bus at the junction of Nathan Road and Waterloo Road, by two men, one of whom was armed with dagger. Single-handed, Mr. Ling tackled his assailants, and so full of fight was he, that when two other roughs joined in the fray, he still refused to give ground and eventually put the whole four to flight. Two of them were armed with daggers.
Mr. Ling did not emerge from the conflict without injury. He received, in all, eight knife cuts on the head and body, but making light of them, refusing to go to hospital in spite of the advice of Dr. Wong Chung-lam, whom he consulted.
No motive was apparent for the attack.

$7,000 FRAUD ALLEGED.

LOCAL FIRM SAID TO BE VICTIMISED.

A fraud involving a large sum was disclosed by a report made by Ho Shek-sang, accountant of the Kung Cheong Imports and Exports firm, to the police yesterday.
He stated that he paid $7,000 to a man who produced a letter which purported to show that he was a representative of a firm with which the Kung Cheong had had dealings. Subsequent developments, however, revealed that the man who collected the money was not so empowered, and it is suggested that the man had by some means made himself acquainted with the business relations and practices between the two firms.

"IMPOVERISHMENT OF WORKERS."

London, Aug. 27.
Following the decision yesterday of the joint meeting of the General Council of the Trades Union Congress and the National Executive of the Labour Party that the new Government should be "vigorously opposed in Parliament and by the movement throughout the country," another point meeting was held to-day, at which members of the Consultative Committee of the Parliamentary Labour Party were present.
Subsequently a remarkable manifesto was issued, signed by Mr. Arthur Henderson.
"New Social Order."
A document of considerable length, it appeals, inter alia, to the masses of the country to rally to the Labour movement in defence of true National interests and a constructive effort towards a new social order.
The new National Government is denounced as "undemocratic" and "unauthorised by the people."
The manifesto alleges that the new Government is "determined to attack the standard of living of the workers in order to meet a situation caused by the policy of private banking interests outside public control, and is attempting to reverse the social policy of the nation."

It does so, the manifesto goes on, "not because the nation's resources have suddenly diminished, nor because the nation cannot afford to provide for its unemployed, nor because the budget cannot be balanced, but primarily because Britain is setting a bad example to other countries in taxing the rich to provide for the necessities of the poor."
The Labour Party claims that the present difficulties of the country can be overcome in other ways and says that while Labour is vitally concerned with the national interests, it emphatically rejects the proposition that this can only be secured by the impoverishment of the workers.
Taxable Capacity.
It declares that the taxable capacity of Great Britain has not been exhausted and suggests the alternative policy of mobilising the country's foreign investments, and a temporary suspension of the sinking fund, in addition to the taxation of fixed interest-bearing income.
Premier's Breather.
The Prime Minister, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, left London to-night for Lisslemouth. He will return to preside over the next meeting of the Cabinet, arranged for Monday.

GIGANTIC LOANS FOR BRITAIN.

IN PARIS AND NEW YORK.

STERLING CRISIS DISSIPATED.

New York, Aug. 27.
According to the New York Evening Post, Wall Street bankers, headed by Mr. J. P. Morgan, have agreed to a new short-term credit of at least $300,000,000 for the British Treasury. Officials do not deny the correctness of the report.
A further suggestion that this short-term credit is to be followed by a long-term credit of $500,000,000 finds little support in banking circles at present.

It has been suggested that a British external loan will be floated in all leading financial centres, but bankers here are somewhat doubtful of the prospects of the success of such a loan at present.
Reports Confirmed.
It is confirmed on the highest authority that discussions for the opening of new British credit have progressed decidedly. In the last twenty-four hours.
An official announcement is expected to-morrow.
The credit will be larger than that advanced in 1925 and its currency will be one year instead of two. Otherwise it will be very similar. A French credit, equivalent to the American, will probably also be arranged.
This credit may be followed by a long term loan in the United States and it is believed that this will be of record size.
The willingness of American bankers to extend credit, it is indicated, is dependent in a large measure upon the assurance of the British Government that the programme of economy will be adopted.
The improvement of British financial credit as a result of the formation of a National Government is evidenced by the fact that sterling improved to 4.85/32 on New York to-day. Parity is about 4.86/16/16.
Sterling exchange in Paris was firm at 123.99/123.95 as a result of rumours that the British Government is contemplating a 20-year $20,000,000—$20,000,000 loan in New York and Paris, at a rate of interest below five per cent.
London Beliefs.
London, Aug. 28.
No confirmation is available in London of the New York report. (Continued on Page 7.)

FORGED NOTES CASE.

TRIAL COMMENCES AT MAGISTRACY.

CONSPIRACY CHARGE.

The preliminary trial of Leo Arthur d'A Guimaraes and a Chinese, Kong Sze-yik, on charges of larceny and conspiracy to defraud an editor of a Chinese newspaper was opened before Mr. E. S. Williams at the Central Police Court yesterday afternoon, when the Crown asked for commitment.

Kong, who is named as the first defendant, and Guimaraes, are jointly charged with larceny of $7,000 from one Wong To-po, with conspiracy to defraud Wong To-po of the money and also that "on divers dates between July 12 and 24 they did conspire together and with other persons not in custody to defraud such persons as may thereafter be induced to part with money."

Mr. T. S. Whyte Smith (Assistant Crown Solicitor) is appearing for the Crown while Mr. Hin-shing Lo (instructed by Mr. J. M. Hall) is for the first defendant and Mr. Leo d'Almada (instructed by Mr. M. M. Watson) for Guimaraes.

Guimaraes is also charged on three similar counts in respect of a sum of $3,000, the property of one Ho Piu-yim but, on the application of Mr. Whyte Smith, the case involving the two defendants is being heard first.

Objections by Defence.

Mr. Lo: I understand there are three charges preferred against my client and I am taking very substantial objection to the third or "C" charge. I think charges "A" and "B" are alternative charges, but "C" is a very objectionable one from my point of view. My objections are fourfold. The first is that under Statute Law, a general statement of evidence would be sufficient, but when the charge is under Common Law the offence with which the accused is charged and the facts and circumstances must be set forth in the charge so that definite and reasonable information be given to the defence and accused must be positively and definitely charged. I submit that "C" charge is bad in that it discloses no specified offence at all.

My second objection is that if the charge discloses any offence at all we will have to place some sort of construction on the two phrases, "on divers dates between July 12 and July 24" and "to defraud such persons as should thereafter be induced to part with money." It is not clear to me that the charge is an attempt to defraud it is bad on the ground of uncertainty, but, if anything at all, it amounts to an attempt to defraud. I do not care how many indefinite number of false pretences are included, but I will say that the charge is bad where the accused person is charged either with felony or misdemeanour and at the same time with an attempt.

A Prejudicial Effect.

Mr. Whyte Smith: I think I must interrupt. I do not think there can be the slightest suggestion of attempt to defraud.

Mr. Lo: If it means anything at all it means an attempt to defraud, but if it does not mean anything at all it is bad for its uncertainty.

"My third submission is that the wording contains an indefinite number of false pretences. I should say the inclusion of this charge might involve the admission of evidence which would otherwise be inadmissible."

His Worship: The Crown is asking for this case to be committed. If evidence is admitted which is improper and which is really bad it won't have any effect later on before the Supreme Court.

Mr. Lo: I agree I have remedy Sir, but I think it may be my defence to put my client in the box and tell you what he has done in this case. It may be that your ENGLISHMAN TURNS BUDDHIST.

George Hutchesson, 24, a well-to-do Englishman, has created a sensation in Bangkok, when he voluntarily entered a Buddhist monastery. He is shown with shaved head and clad in gold and white robe, kneeling before sacred relics at the beautiful temple of Wat Rajapradit, where his ordination took place. Hutchesson, who has been given the Buddhist name, Phra Akkappa Sanno, may retire from the priesthood at any time after four months. Like others priests in Siam, he must beg for his one meal each day.

Worship will discharge him in spite of the fact that this is a committal case. The presence of the third charge would certainly have the effect of prejudicing the accused person in his defence. The words, "defraud such persons as may thereafter be induced to part with money" are rather vague. Who are the persons? Do they include the complainant in the first and second charge? I am sure this charge is also bad because of its duplicity, in that it contains an indefinite number of false pretences. If one induces a person to part with money he may be guilty of larceny, or false pretences.

Substantial Objections.

"Therefore I think that my four objections are rather substantial, and if I satisfy your Worship on any one of these points I ask your Worship to quash the charge. It has the effect of prejudicing my client's case. I am sure Mr. Whyte Smith will agree with me that all these four objections I have raised would certainly have the effect of quashing the charge."

Mr. d'Almada: I wish to associate myself with the remarks of my learned friend. The effect generally speaking, of charge "C" would be necessarily embarrassing to charges "A" and "B." It has no relation to these charges and seems to stand by itself in its unusual wording. Its total lack of proper wording and vagueness is bad. The point that your Worship mentioned just now as regards this objection being decided at the Supreme Court, has this drawback, that it may be on the evidence on "A" and "B" alone there may be no evidence to send the defendant to the Criminal Sessions, whereas with "C" included you might come to a different conclusion altogether.

All Alternative Charges.

Mr. Whyte Smith: These charges are all alternative charges and there is no suggestion that a conviction is asked for on any one separate charge. With regard to the first objection of Mr. Lo, namely that there are not sufficient particulars, I would submit that at this stage it would be quite sufficient if I disclose the offence in my opening. I think it might be rather difficult to put in writing this charge—at least it would take a great deal of space. I think that my friends may be perfectly satisfied if they hear my opening statement. If that does not disclose sufficient particulars

PICTURES FROM RUSSIAN "FORCED LABOUR" LUMBER CAMPS.

Apparently workers in the lumber camps of Russia enroll voluntarily for their jobs, for this picture, smuggled out of the country, shows registration officials at one of the camps signing up the recruit visible at right. He is a young Moujik, still a boy, who is said to have come from the south to work as a lumberman. Note the picture of Lenin on the wall in the background.

This picture, smuggled out of the Soviet Union and taken to London as evidence of conditions in the northern lumber camps, shows a young Russian girl trimming a tree. Note her heavy boots and masculine attire. It has been charged that young girl workers like this one receive only two scanty meals a day for their arduous toil.

Heart of Liane by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Liane Barrett, 18 and beautiful, lives in a cramped New York apartment with her mother, Mrs. Barrett, a rather faded actress. On a hot night Liane goes to dinner with Molly Grady, a neighbor, and two of Molly's men friends. There is a shooting and the girl is held as a witness. She sends a note to her mother who arrives and reveals to her that Liane is innocent of wrongdoing. That night at the theatre, where Liane is playing, Liane encounters a handsome stranger who speaks her name.

CHAPTER IX

Chuck Desmond could be an entertaining dinner companion. Having summoned a taxi he handed Liane in with a flourish and demanded to be driven to Wishwash, the sea-food palace down on the shore. He promised Cass he would have her daughter home in good time for her evening appearance at the theatre.

It was all very surprising and Liane enjoyed it. The young man talked easily and wittily. His was the vernacular of the newspaper city room, crossed with the world of sports and of Broadway. He was as cynical as a stage manager, in some ways as artless as a child of six.

"Muriel will—well, she'll crown me for this," Liane said, laughing, as they sat over their coffee.

Desmond lifted an interrogative eyebrow. "Says which?"

"Oh, all this!" Liane indicated the dancing floor, mirrored and smooth, on which a few early couples were even now executing slow, snail-like steps. The tented top sparkled with lights. Cars were beginning to buzz into the drive, their wheels crunching on the gravel outside.

Desmond regarded his cup indifferently. "Nice girl, Muriel, but thoughtless," he observed drily. "You were pretty sweet to come with me on a last minute bid."

"I was delighted," Liane told him. She meant it.

"Well, it was my luck. No fooling, I do hate to hang on the nose-bag when I'm alone. There's genius for you!"

She couldn't tell whether he was laughing at her or not. Not thrilled, not all-over gooseflesh and cold chills running up and down her spine as when she was with Van Robard. Just pleasantly, quietly satisfied with things. Chuck Desmond, who had been given the glad eye from the Battery to 125th street, would have been amused at her estimate of him.

For his part, Desmond thought, "Good pleasant aliveness, the significant width between her soft, dark eyes and her engaging trick of listening with a breathless air of concentration."

not number" and considered the characterization complete.

"He's not bad looking really," Liane summed up her companion. Entirely she overlooked the charms of this devil-may-care young man in the rather pious suit.

"I'll be seeing you," Chuck Desmond said, patting her hand as the taxi drew up at the theatre.

Desmond told the driver to hot-foot it for the station. He would just have time to make the first act of "The Frolic." Well, his evening hadn't been wasted entirely.

Elsie wanted to know, "Who's the new boy friend?"

Liane said demurely, "My mother used to know his mother."

"Oh, that bologny!" Elsie lost interest. She went on, "D'ye know, I'm kind of sorry we're checking out of here next month. I've got used to the smell of new-mown hay mixed with my carbon monoxide and I'll miss it. Still, there's nothing like September 1 in Times Square. There's a feeling in the air—oh, I don't know—see if something were just about to happen."

"I know," said Liane dreamily. "I know just what you mean but a school does happen."

"Never can tell," Elsie winked elaborately. "Believe it or not, there are plots hatching around here that don't meet the eye."

Liane, thinking of her adventure that afternoon, shivered a little. Elsie, not noticing, continued, "That Muriel girl, for instance. Is she a fast worker? Believe it or not, she has little boy blue eating out of her hand. Wait till the scandal columns get hold of that. Which Junior League is that way about what drama star?"

"She only met him this afternoon," Liane protested.

"Yes, I know. But what that dame does with 24 hours is nobody's business," said the cynical Elsie. "Mrs. Blue's little boy may be hooked before he knows it. He's not used to these high-powered debutantes. I don't mind," she explained, "if she'll lay off my Clive. But Muriel's a natural born poacher, and if she thought she could burn me up by going for him, she would."

Liane had heard a great deal of this in the past so she lent a mildly inattentive ear. "I wouldn't worry," she said, absently. "Yes, Mrs. Griddle, of course I've got your tickets ready."

Elsie took the hint and drifted along in the direction of her dressing room.

"Muriel's supposed to be helping me tonight. What a fake she is as a working girl!" Liane grumbled resentfully to herself as she smiled her set smile, punched tickets and made change. "Poor little rich girl, playing at being useful, that's what she is."

Muriel's role of box office assistant had been mostly a picturesque fiction. She appeared late and left early. She never allowed business to interfere with pleasure. Liane couldn't help being resentful. The work meant bread and butter to her. She could not afford to shirk.

The little coop grew stifling as the evening wore on. Liane sat stiff and watchful, smiling her professional smile at the late comers, the women all smartly cropped and heavily scented in their frail chiffons. When the doors flew open at the intermission she caught a glimpse of a dark, lowering face above a dazzling shirtfront. Van Robard. He did not even glance toward Liane. The girl with him was small, lusciously blonde. Her black frock was daintily cut away at the back to show a rounded pair of golden shoulders. She talked animatedly, a cigarette dangling from the corner of her geranium-stained mouth. She looked bored and exotic.

Liane's heart was beating so rapidly it almost stifled her. Of course he must know she was there but he wouldn't even look at her. What a fool she was to mind! On she hated him, she hated him!

Liane had a sudden wild longing for green fields and cool dark places where she could bury her face in long grass and weep long and satisfyingly, unheard.

Instead she had to sit there, passive, immobile, in her old grey dress, feeling like a shadow on the edge of the pretty painted throng.

How she envied all these young girls at Willow Stream. They had everything—money, family, that vaunted and elusive thing called background. They could reach out and take what they wanted in their greedy little jewelled hands with the nicotine-stained fingers. No matter what they desired, a star sapphire, a trip of Europe, a handsome husband, there was almost always some adoring male to get it for them. What did they know of striving, of heartbreak? What did they know of saving up for a winter coat, wearing some friend's castoff shoes? No, they had their little ermine wraps, their half a hundred Paris frocks, their perfumes, their horses and their fumes. No wonder when a fascinating man looked about for a girl to admire he chose one of them. They were so poised, so admired. They had a nimbus of glamour about them. The Clderellas of the world hadn't a chance beside such rivals.

She put her head down to hide the rash of tears that threatened to come.

A shadow fell across the book in front of her. "Don't move. Don't say a word," warned a menacing voice. "Slide up that window and give me the cash!"

The startled girl looked up into sombre eyes under a pulled-down cap. Trembling she obeyed. Her fascinated gaze watched the blue barrel of the gun he levelled at her. There was an electric tenseness in the little foyer. Two other men, both armed, stood in the doorway. "You people, give up all you're got," commanded one. The women, whimpering, had begun to strip themselves of their rings. One screamed and was ordered summarily by her white-faced escort to shut up.

Liane fumbled at the catch that swung open the barred door of the cage. Underneath the shelf was a short, ugly weapon to be used in case of emergency. She thought quickly.

"I can't budge this," Liane said, with a child's querulousness. "You'll have to come around."

"No funny business, now," warned the man in the cap, backing off. As Liane opened the door of the coop, she brought her good right hand down suddenly. This invader fell with a thump.

All at once there was confusion in the lobby. A woman shrieked. "She got him." A gun barked once. There was a rush and a scurrying. Four men were grappling with the robber who had fired his gun while the other made a precipitate rush for a parking car.

A giddiness swept over Liane. She stood staring at the slumped figure at her feet. "Take him away, somebody," she moaned weakly. Everything swirled blackly around her. She felt herself falling.

When she opened her eyes Van Robard was bending over her.

"Good girl," he was saying huskily. "You were the best man among us."

She felt those words were her accolade. The girl in the black dress was whimpering. Somebody cheered. Well, she'd showed them, anyhow, hadn't she? She might be a beggar maid but she wasn't a coward.

Van was carrying her into the little office now. He was all solicitude, the blonde girl forgotten. There was a terrific hubbub all about. A woman was having hysterics. Men were rushing to and fro. Under cover of the noise Van murmured, "Tried to get you to look at me before to-night, but you were absorbed in business."

The look of faint reproach Liane gave him was tinged with mockery.

"I saw you," she murmured, "Hadden't you better go back to her?"

He flushed angrily. The little doctor bustling in with his black bag interrupted their tableau. "Here, here, Mr. Wells thinks I'd better look you over. Any bruises?"

Van, defeated, shrugged himself away. Liane submitted to the physician's ministrations.

"Right as rain," was his verdict. "They tell me you were a brave young lady."

She smiled at him faintly, scarcely listening. Liane thought, "Right as rain except for a great bruise on my heart."

THERAPION No. 3

R. C. SHERRIFF, UNDER GRADUATE.

WORKING FOR DEGREE AT OXFORD.

The author of "Journey's End" is to go up to New College, Oxford, as an undergraduate.

At the age of 34 this famous playwright will unobtrusively join the throng of young men on Paddington Station next October; will for two years attend lectures and tutorials in History; will undergo all the rigours of University discipline; and will emerge at the end triumphant with a B.A.

He means to live quietly, unnoticed; he will be only one among the crowd of his fellow undergraduates.

Why He is Going

What is more, Bob Sherriff is keenly excited at the prospect.

"The thing that surprises me," he said, "is that the Oxford statutes for admission are so much broader than I expected, and that it is possible for a man of my age to find so attractive a course open to him. Everything has been made smooth for me by the Warden of New College (the Rt. Hon. H. A. L. Fisher), who has given me immense help."

"Why am I going up to Oxford? Well, there are two main reasons. The first, to be honest, is because it will be fun. I was never able to go to Oxford, and, anyway, the war would have interfered. But now that I haven't either to fight or find a job I am going to take the chance."

"If I Fizzle Out."

"In the second place, I want to get a degree. At the end of two years I hope to be a B.A., and then, if I fizzle out as a writer, I shall be qualified to turn my hand to something else—possibly schoolmastering."

"Do you want to be a schoolmaster?"

"Don't look so shocked," he replied, laughing. "I should enjoy it very much."

"But you're not going to give up writing?"

"Certainly not," was the very emphatic answer. "Don't get the idea that because I'm going to Oxford I'm going into retirement."

"But writing will never be a whole-time job for me. When I worked in an insurance office all day I used to rush home and write for three hours every night. That habit lasts. Even now I can't touch pen in the morning."

"Actually I'm very far from stopping writing. In October, just about when I'm going up to Oxford, I hope to publish my first novel. I am also working now on another play (a translation from the Hungarian) for Gilbert Miller."

"I Row a Bit."

"Anyway, it will probably be best to have a house or flat. I shall be forced to do a good deal of business outside my Oxford work, and keep in touch with my agents and the theatre."

"You'll have to be back in Oxford every night at 12 o'clock."

"Oh, yes," he said, cheerfully. "That's half the point. And wearing a gown after dark, and things like that."

"Sport? Well, I row a bit" (actually very well) "and I've done a certain amount of coaching. I hope I shall find something to do on the river. And I'm going to join the O.U.D.S., if they'll have me."

"Will do Me Good."

"He sucked his pipe and thought a little. 'Seriously,' he said, 'it will do me all the good in the world.'"

"Writers are very apt to run in grooves, and I've noticed that, if you're a writer, you meet nobody who isn't one, too."

"A very famous author told me the other day that he depended for his writing more and more on what he had seen before he was 21. One gets out of touch with the world."

"And that's one of the chief reasons," he added, getting up. "Why I'm looking forward to Oxford. It will keep me in touch, as well as being valuable experience otherwise."

"What do I think of Oxford as a whole? I'll tell you that in a year—perhaps!"

MOB STORMS A PRISON.

TROOPS OVERPOWERED.

Bombay, July 18.
The gaoi at Pudukotah (capital of the Native State) has been stormed by a mob of thousands of people, and all the prisoners have been released.

A detachment of the Punjab Regiment had to be despatched from Trichinopoly this morning to the scene of the trouble.

The public offices and the residence of the President of the Council of Administration were also attacked, and various places set on fire, the police and local military force being overpowered.

The police Commissioner was disabled.

The trouble is said to have been stirred up ostensibly as a protest against the Pyjama-Parasol Ensembles.

White shantung, makes the languorous two-piece suit, shown above, with royal blue touches in the skirt, sandals and the plaid silk sunshade which takes the place of a hat. For one who prefers flowers, there's a gay flowered shantung suit, right, with poppies in California red and orange tints making an all-over design. This one-piece suit has a backless bodice cut, with just a strap of the material running around the neck from shoulder to shoulder. The trousers are full and long, hiding the smart red and orange bench sandals. The pyjama-parasol picks up the poppy colours in a dashing big plaid which contrasts with the figured design of the dress.

NOVEL WAYS WITH VEGETABLES.

Don't we all get tired of vegetables that are just boiled? Potatoes, for instance, are so dull in their plain boiled state that eating them becomes almost mechanical.

Yet there are many ways in which every vegetable can be given a unique flavour.

Curried potatoes, for instance, will be a distinct and appetising change.

They can be boiled until almost done, then cut into cubes, and their boiling completed in a sauce to which curry powder has been added. Another way is to fry them a golden brown, dusting them with curry powder when almost cooked.

Instead of the ordinary baked potato, try this way:—Cut a hole in the top after baking, then mash the inside with butter, milk, and seasoning, and bake until heated through.

A potato omelette is ideal with bacon or fried fish. Mash cold boiled potatoes very finely, and add just enough milk to moisten. Season, and fry in a well-greased pan until the bottom is nicely browned, sprinkle with finely-chopped parsley and onion, cut in half, and fold. Serve very hot to ensure success.

Have you ever cooked watercress? Many people dislike it in its raw state, and so ignore this most healthful of foods which contains much iron and the all-important Vitamin B.

They may enjoy it, however, if the watercress is served in this way:—Boil it in salted water; press through a sieve, and then make into a thick soup using either stock or milk to complete a delicious dish.

Even parsnips can be made interesting to the palate. Try this little dish. Clean half a dozen, cut them in halves, and boil for an hour. Put them in a baking dish and pour a tasty white sauce over them. Now sprinkle some grated cheese and breadcrumbs on top and bake for half an hour.

CAR BRUSHES.

Every motorist who cleans his or her own car will approve of the new car brushes and hosepipes all in one. The brush is on a wooden handle, which is fixed parallel with a hosepipe to fasten to a water tap. When the water is turned on, the jet appears from the centre of the brush, so that the car may be hosed and brushed at the same time. Two brushes are provided, one with soft bristles for the more delicate parts of the bodywork, and one with wiry bristles for the coachwork underneath the car.

BEAUTY HINTS.

[By Alicia Hart.]

Blurred vision doesn't mean you need glasses, necessarily.

Sometimes it is your liver. Sometimes it is fatigue. Sometimes it is because you have been looking intently at too many things too long.

Exercises for the eyes, plus plenty of rest between exercises, can do wonders for your eyes. Some eye specialists teach certain daily dozens for eyes that bring back wandering vision to an ability to focus.

Just exercising your eyes, without knowing why, is a dangerous thing to do. But certain exercises are good for them generally and can do only beneficial things to your vision. Here are some mild eye-exercises which will relax your eyes, if nothing else. They might actually help your focusing powers, if you did them regularly.

1. Sit still, relaxed, and fix your eyes on some small object, then switch to the electric light, the match box on the table, or some such small thing. Look at it steadily for long enough time to count five, then roll your eyes upward, without lifting your head, until you seem to be trying to look up through your forehead.

Hold that look while you breathe naturally and count five. Then bring your glance back down to the small object again. Do you see just one of it? Or do you see two? By doing this kind of exercise faithfully, several times a day, you probably will end by seeing just one, which means your vision is better.

Roll Your Own.

2. Cast your eyes down, then slowly roll them out as if trying to look at your right ear, then straight across the front, then trying to look at your left ear, then down again. This rotary motion is excellent for resting the eyes. Do it slowly about five times one way, reverse, roll them the other way, then palm your hands and try to "see black" a few seconds. I think you will find your eyes much rested.

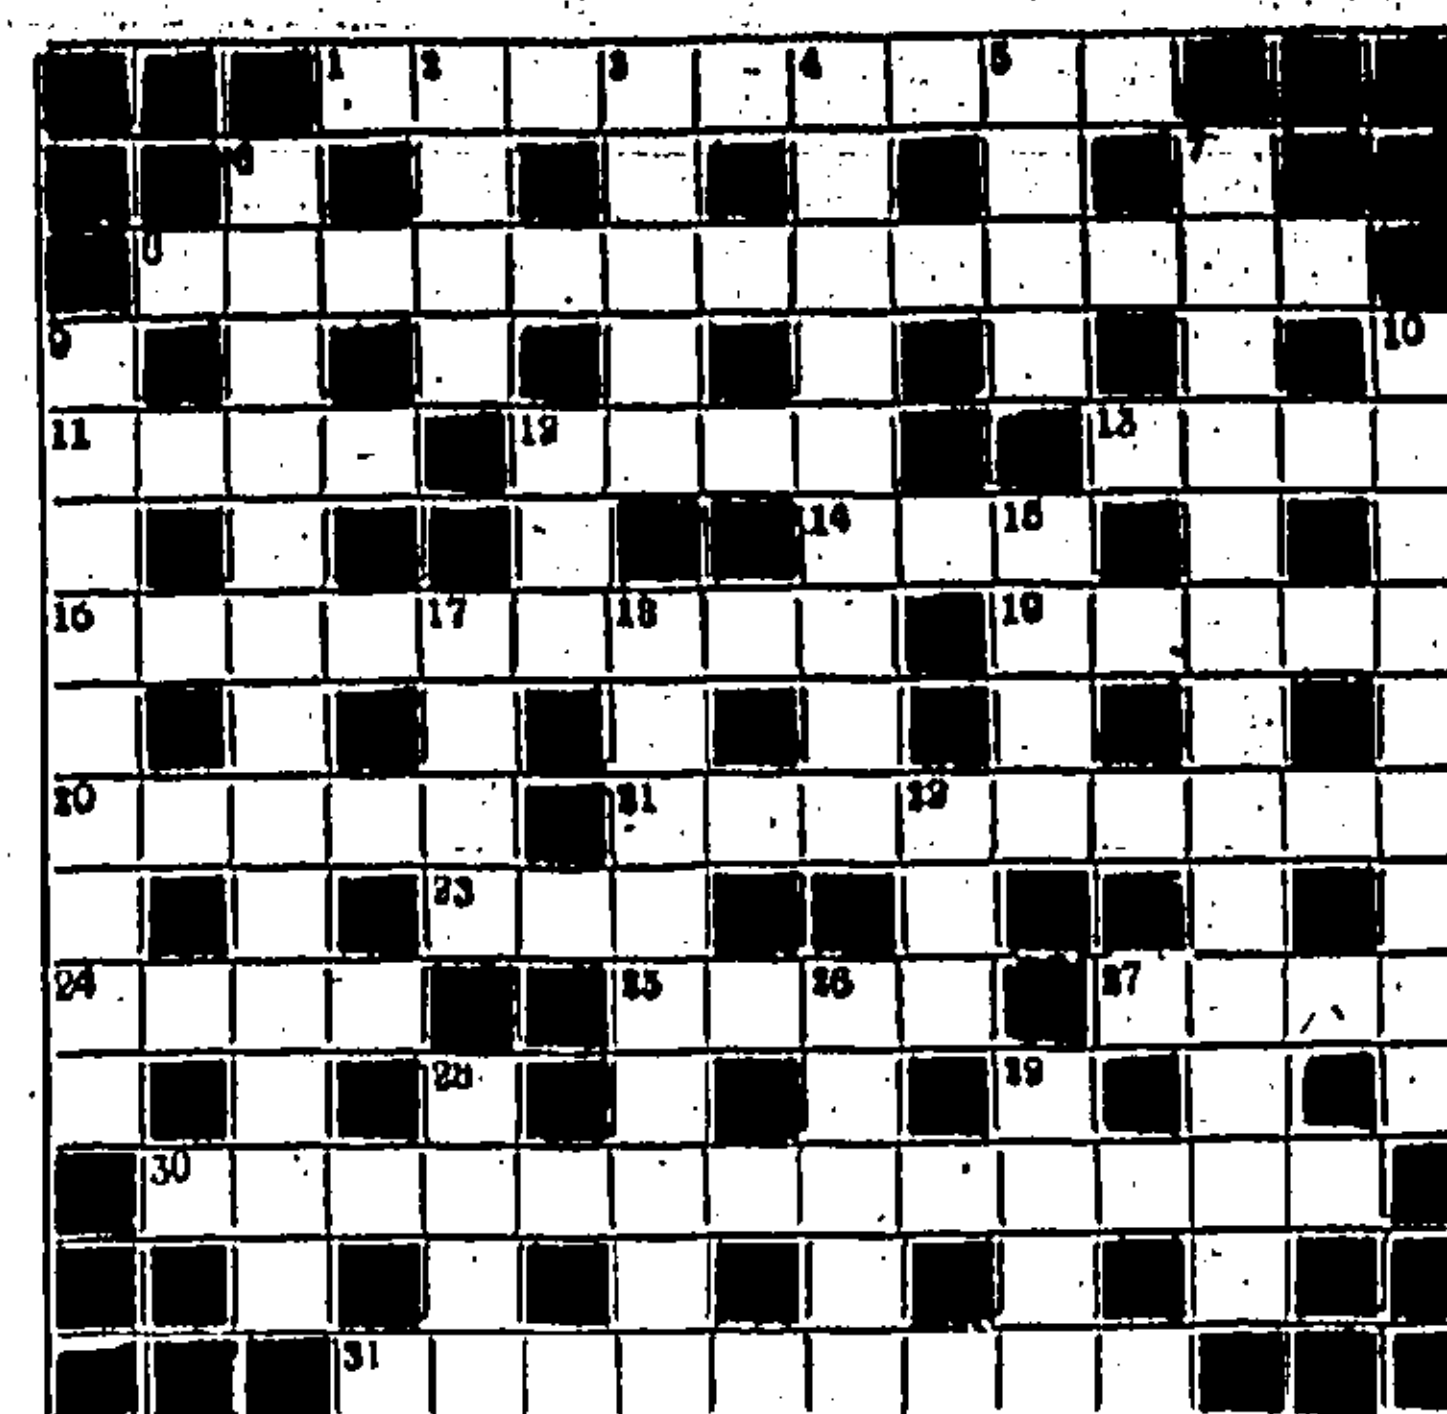

Rolling your eyes always has been considered a coquettish act. This exercise proves that it is a good thing to keep a few such coquettish tricks right in your own bag.

For The Autumn.

A brown felt hat of the new type is encircled by a single white clipped ostrich feather. The tiny brim dips low over the right eye and rises high above the left ear.

MUNICIPAL BANK
OF CANTON.A $500,000 BUILDING TO BE ERECTED.

The able management of the Municipal Bank of Canton has made it one of the most progressive of local banking houses and has ensured for the institution the unwavering confidence of the public.

Mr. T. C. Lee, president of the bank, has submitted to the Municipal Council plans for the construction of a modern bank-building to accommodate this municipal institution. The proposed building is to be an eight-storey one and to cost about $500,000.

It is understood that the scheme will meet with the approval of the Municipal Council and the Bureau of Public Works will duly be requested to find a proper site for this building as well as to draw up plans for same. Construction work will start as soon as these are ready.—Canton Gazette.

A Provincial Bank.

Plans are now under consideration by the Kwangsi government authorities to reinstate the provincial bank which was closed down for several years.

The National Government is reported to have given orders to the national treasury to provide $500,000 each month as reserve fund for the reinstated bank which is expected to resume business on September 1.

When the bank resumes operation, its notes will be redeemed and efforts would be made to adjust its affairs so the full face value of its notes may be regained.—Canton Sun.

LANCASHIRE'S PROBLEM.

At a moment when there are high hopes that the British Government will not only tackle the financial problem promptly and effectually, but will also bring about conditions helpful to industrial development in the Old Country, it is interesting to note that Lancashire, through its new voluntary Development Council, is entering upon a campaign to attract new industries. It is now recognised that the volume of employment in the cotton trade can never again be what it was, for even if sales recover, this will be achieved only by way of intensive mechanisation which will reduce the demand for labour. The coal industry in the county is also declining, and textile engineering can hardly hope to do more than hold its own.

With these facts kept well in mind, it is clear that there must be either a permanent wave of unemployment or short time, or the exclusion of a large number of women from industry, or probably both, unless new industries can be persuaded to settle in the area. It is being felt in some quarters that it would have been better if the artificial silk trade had been localised in Lancashire rather than in the South, but the fact remains that whilst the North was tinkering with the cotton industry problem, other interests got busy in the South and launched an industry which has now got firmly on its feet. The new Council should be of some value, but doubt is being expressed whether it will be able to achieve much without statutory powers. What Lancashire needs, according to one commentator, is not an unofficial body for propaganda, but a fully-constituted statutory Council for Regional Development, armed with powers which will enable it to make real provision for new services, and offer real inducements to new industries to reverse the current trend southwards. Such regional bodies, it is felt, are a necessary feature of any sound policy of national development. Certain it is that nothing will be accomplished by merely sitting still and allowing events to take their own course.

Lancashire has come in for a deal of sympathy in recent years, as well as a good deal of criticism. In both the one instance and in the other, there has been on the part of many commentators a failure to take cognisance of hard facts. We can and do feel for those who have lost their means of livelihood, but on the other hand, there has been good ground for many of the strictures passed regarding the control and management of the cotton industry. The crisis has not suddenly come; it has been long accumulating; and we fear that many of the concerns have failed to adjust themselves to changing conditions. Competition from the East has been a big factor, and it still remains so. At the bottom of this aspect is the living wage problem, for it is obvious that the British worker cannot be brought down to the standard of pay common in the East. Whatever reforms are undertaken for modernising the industry and increasing its efficiency, this wage problem remains. For this reason, it is wise that steps be taken to encourage the springing up of new industries. And, limited though its scope may be, we can only hope that the new Council will be able to contribute something towards this end.

Marathon Sermonising.

The time is rapidly approaching, we are convinced, when marathon preaching will have to be placed on a properly organised basis. At the present time, there is much to suggest that owing to the absence of specific rules governing the spontaneously developed contest, late competitors are taking a somewhat unfair advantage of early runners. For instance, it is reported that the Rev. Sandifer, whose picture appears on Page Three to-day, and who is the present holder of the record, paused for a while in the pulpit in order to change a suit of clothes which was soaking with perspiration. It is a question whether he ought not to have been disqualified, or his tally of hours calculated only up to the time of his change of apparel. When the Rev. Futtner of Los Angeles set up a 20 hours' mark for his fellows of the flock to aim at, he did not have the same opportunity for a rest, though it is possible that he employed the well-known device of pausing to rebuke with a stern glance a restive member of the congregation and of taking off and restoring to their proper sphere, his spectacles. However, whatever the precise circumstances, it is clear that the door is left open for certain subterfuges giving new campaigners an advantage over their pace-makers, though, of course, deliberate intention of seeking to break the record by not exactly fair means could not be suggested. We can only suggest that certain regulations should be enforced to make the contests equal. There should be an officially appointed umpire, with stop watch, who would give the performers a certain time limit for the completion of the forensic gestures associated with public speaking in its many forms and requiring pauses for their proper performance. Specified periods would be granted for the taking of nourishment, etc. Throat pastels might be permitted in limited quantities. Incidentally, the Rev. Sandifer's 50-hour address was on the subject: "What's Wrong with the Church?" We should not be surprised if he supplied the answer.

HONGKONG SHARE MARKET.

OFFICIAL SUMMARY BY STOCK EXCHANGE.

The market opened rather quiet this morning, with one or two exceptions, such as Providents, Cements and China Lights, which were applied for at quotations. Banks changed hands at $2.035. Unions, which were done at $57 1/2, were in demand at $550 at the close. Underwriters had buyers at $5.95. Providents (old) were reported having been dealt in at $6.10 and $6 1/2, but there were further buyers at the latter rate. The new shares, after having changed hands at $2.05 and $3, had further sellers at the latter figure, but there were still buyers at $2.05. Hotels (old) were put through at $17.70, and there were sellers at the close at $17.05. The new shares were actively dealt in at $17.05, sellers asking $17.10, and at the close were buyers at $16.80. H.K. Lands were quite, with sales reported at $11 1/2. Humphreys' old and new remained unchanged at quotations. Renties have a nominal quotation of $17 1/2. Ewos, with sales reported at $15.80, were in request at $15.70 without

DAY BY DAY

SENTIMENTAL PEOPLE FIDDLE
HARMONIES ON THE STRING OF SEN-SUALISM.—Meredith.

A Chinese case of puerperal fever was notified yesterday.

The E. and A. Company's s.s. St. Albans is due here with the Australian mails at noon to-morrow.

Banished in 1925 for ten years, a man named Chu Cheung was charged before Mr. Fraser at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning with returning to the Colony before the expiration of his term and was sentenced to nine months' hard labour.

Mr. E. R. Childe, Dr. S. To Wong and Dr. S. P. Lee were each fined $10 by Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court this morning for driving a motor car which had not had the licence renewed. Dr. Lee was fined a further $5 for not having renewed his driver's licence.

Falling from the top floor verandah of the Hospital Building at Whitfield Barracks, where he was a patient, a seamy of the Jhat Regiment, named Labhu, fractured his skull and died very soon afterwards. The accident occurred on Wednesday evening. The remains were taken to the Mortuary.

In his hurry to get aboard the ferry at Mongkok yesterday, a street coolie made a mis-step and dropped into the water, suffering terrible injuries when he was caught between the launch and the wharf. He was taken out of the water and removed to the Kwong Wah Hospital, where his condition is considered critical.

An unemployed man named Liu Yuen was charged before Mr. Fraser at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning with the theft of a jade bangle which he snatched from a child in Yauwatt Market. His Lordship said it was a serious offence as it had been committed against a child, and sentenced the defendant to two months' hard labour and 12 strokes of the birch.

The Ministering Children's League has benefited to the extent of $1,550 as a result of a picnic and two bridge drives organised by Mrs. J. B. Newell, and also by the sale of raffle tickets. Thanks are due to the following firms, who kindly assisted with gifts and services:—Messrs. British American Tobacco Co., Ltd., Calbeck MacGregor & Co., Ltd., Fook Weng & Co., Kelly and Walsh, Ltd., Kwong Sang, Komer and Komer, Lane Crawford, Ltd., Pioneer Silk Store, A. S. Watson & Co., Ltd., Wing On Co., Ltd. Prizes in the raffle were won by holders of tickets Nos. 238, 923, 605, 615, and 747.

Leading to further business, Shanghai Cottons were wanted at $104, but nothing resulted. Zoong Sings remained at $12 buyers.

Trams were in demand at $22, as were Star Ferries at $94, China Lights at $28 1/2 and Electrics at $81 1/2, but there are no transactions to report.

Telephones (part paid) were done at $34 1/2, and buyers at the close wanted shares at $34.

Cements (combined), which were an active market, were disposed of at $28.80 and $20.70, sellers asking the former rate, but buyers at the close were offering $20.60. The old shares were wanted at $13 1/2 and the new at $5, but sales did not transpire at these rates.

Watsons, after sales at $17 and $17 1/2, with sellers asking $17 1/2, closed with buyers prevailing at $17.10.

Down to the Sea in Dorries.

By C. A. B.

ARHIE waited in the dory where the seaweed lifted on the flowing tide at the bottom of Crowell's field. "No hurry," the brothers said, as Skip took me up to the cottage to change into more suitable attire for the trip. Low shoes and fancy socks would pass muster for a daylight run to see the seals at Potter's Ledge, but they planned to catch some fish on this occasion. In "Skip's" best pair of hip-high boots and oilskins, I had the feeling of having attained a new dignity, properly clad for initiation into an ancient and honorable craft.

Tubs of line, ready baited, were transferred from the dory to Skip's boat, moored in the channel beyond the eel grass. The flash of a pocket torch showed me where to stow myself out of the way, while Archie made fast the dory for towing astern. The motor spluttered for a couple of turns; a liberal sprinkling of engine oil, and the flywheel settled down to a steady run.

The open exhaust barked clamorously in the stillness of the early morning. An answering "put-put-put" came across the harbour from near Bull Island, where fellow fishermen also were getting out to reach the fishing ground before daybreak.

The swell of the incoming tide could be felt on the way out past Cranberry Island. A light mist lay on the water. Jagged cliffs loomed up suddenly. We swung around sharply to the right to pass through the Gap, a narrow passage between seaweed-coated rocks, saving a good mile in rounding the point to the nets where brother William waited with a dory-load of glistening herring. "Bait for the hand lines," Archie explained, as a few bushels of herring were shovelled into the compartment where my generously packed dinner had been stowed. William's old straw hat looked quaint as he waved a humorous good-bye, and there in the gentle swell beyond the Gap.

"It'll be a purty morning," shouted Skip above the noise of the exhaust pipe. He pointed astern to the eastward, where faint shafts of light were piercing through the misty grey. As the light shafts opened up, Skip said he had sometimes heard them described as "angel wings" of the morning. "They were surely in the uttermost parts of the sea. Beyond that field of fishermen's toil off the south shore of Nova Scotia, the wings of the morning were approaching from the farther side of the Atlantic Ocean."

The fog alarm of Gull Rock lighthouse came booming up on the port beam. Stars were showing overhead, but they were of no use to Skip or Archie for steering. Sometimes, in clear weather, Skip said they would steer by one of the "clippers" nearer the horizon. The compass showed the course to be south sou'-west. After about thirty-five minutes from the time when Gull Rock had been passed, the brothers began to make heady. No trace of shore line could be seen, but to the westward a distant fog signal could be heard from the vicinity of Roseway or McNutt's Island. Doubtless Skip could tell, too, from other sounds or signs exactly where Western Head lay, and how far offshore we were just during over. Archie threw out a small anchoring iron with about forty fathoms of stout line attached. The other end of the line held a wooden keg, painted red and black, and carrying a small flag. The keg marked the beginning of the trawl—a fishing line about half a mile long, with hooks spaced about two fathoms apart.

The fishermen brothers paid out the trawl, baited with squid. After several tubs of line had been emptied by practiced hands as the boat moved forward, another keg went overboard, to carry the end of one trawl and the beginning of another of equal length. With the last tub emptied, Archie climbed into the dory with a bucket of herring, and rowed away, to try some hand-lining in comfort by himself.

The mist dissolved before the glory of the rising sun. The shore line lay low along the western horizon. The estuary of the Jordan River could be made out, with Blue Island marking the entrance. Archie's dory had become a tiny bobbing speck to the north. Hand lines were out. There were big cod, about Skip had already hauled in several. My own line commenced to contribute to the harvest with a fine haddock. Cod, haddock and occasionally a big pollack came up almost as fast as the lines could be baited, until an hour or more of hand-lining had harvested with a fine haddock. Cod, skins and sweaters were discarded as the work became warmer. The sun glinted over a glorious expanse of ocean's blue.

The big fish were easing off. Dogfish were putting in an appearance. Skip produced some cold pork, bread, doughnuts and a stone jar of drinking water. While the cod and haddock were coming in fast, there had been no thought of stopping for a "muk-up." My own pail, adorned with herring scales on the outside, but clean within, contained some fancy details to add to the variety of the breakfast bill of fare.

Porpoises were playing about the boat in the sunlight. A strange sound, like an exhaust from a deep tank, drew near. "Whale!" exclaimed Skip, pointing to the sea monster travelling slowly east about two hundred yards away. Uncommon sea birds, haags, gannets and Mother Cary's chicks, a dense flock of gulls following a school of small fish, sometimes the black fin of a shark, would glide past. The smoke of an ocean liner could be seen far out to the southeast, doubtless heading for Boston, with Cape Sable on the starboard bow.

A breeze from the land brought the fragrance of bay leaves, blueberry moors, hayfields and cedar groves. The coast line seemed much nearer. The tide had turned, swinging the boat round and carrying the lead sinkers of the hand lines in the current. Skip decided to haul the trawl.

Archie's distant dory showed the way back to the first marking buoy. The trawl had become very heavy. It had to be hauled in over a pulley wheel. Skip adroitly disengaged the fish from the gannets as they came in over the bow. Some big cod he called "stenkers." They were the kind to bring the best price when city folk went marketing.

Dogfish were snapped back brusquely into the sea. Skate went back, too, though the fins of skate make good eating. The trawl grew heavier. Even Skip's hands needed the aid of thickly woven "nippers" to grip the line. A small halibut flopped in, with a welcome greeting from the fisherman.

It became necessary to clear away the catch from about Skip's legs to the after compartment. With the last fathom of trawl in, every available space had been filled, and Archie's dory had been brought alongside to take some of the "stenkers."

The breeze had freshened. White caps were running; sometimes splashing over the stern of the laden boat. A swordfish almost within harpooning distance had reluctantly to be passed by, as the fishing boat with dory in tow plodded around West Head. Once around the point, out of the choppy seas, the novice member took the helm, while Skip and Archie cleaned fish assiduously for an hour or more, much to the satisfaction of a following convoy of gulls and terns. The spires of Lockport looked more than ever homelike. The bell buoy sent out a friendly greeting. Cranberry Island, Carter's and the Inner harbour basked in the afternoon sun.

As the fisherman for the day, initiated in the hauling of a catch of 3,000 pounds of cod and haddock, looked out from an upstairs window after being duly batched, fed and clad in soft raiment—the boat lay out in the channel beyond the eel grass. Archie sat baiting trawls for next morning, while Skip's strong shoulders bore a tub of line down to the dory moored on the whinge at the bottom of Crowell's field.

JEWISH LADY'S REQUESTS.

SHANGHAI BENEFITS.

Jewish charitable bequests are contained in the will of the late Miss Mary Perry, alias Miss Mary Samuel Perry, who died at Shanghai on February 26, this year, leaving Shanghai net estate worth Taels 108,813.90, while Hongkong estate amounts to $118,000.

Re-securing of probate has been granted to Mr. Lawrence Kadoorie, No. 6, Great Western Road, Shanghai, one of the executors.

Testatrix bequeaths to her trustees, free of duty, the sum of $1,000 (Mex) upon trust to invest it in any securities they may think fit and pay the income to any association in Shanghai appointed by them, in order to defray the cost of, and to provide for, the performance of anniversary ceremonies in memory of her parents, sister, brothers and herself.

She sets aside the sum of $2,000 to be invested and the income distributed among poor Jews in Poota, India, yearly, during the Passover and during the period between New Year and the Day of Atonement, in the name of her father and mother, Samuel Perry and Aziza Perry.

Testatrix directs that the sum of Taels 40,000 shall be provided for the Shanghai General Hospital, for the employment of one free bed for Jews in the third-class ward, in the name of her brother, Moses Perry; two free beds for Jewesses in the third-class ward in the name of Aziza Perry; and one free bed for Jews in the third-class ward in the name of her brother, Isaac Perry, such beds to be used only by persons certified as deserving by the Jewish Communal Association of Shanghai.

Another portion of the will directs that the sum of $3,000 (Mex) be distributed among any of her near needy relatives in Baghdad.

The residue of the estate, after providing for personal bequests, is to be used for the purpose of buying a piece of land in Baghdad, and building upon it a synagogue to be called "Beth Shemuel." At the sole discretion of the trustees, however, they are given the power to build an eye hospital instead, and if this is decided upon it will be called the Aziza Perry Hospital. Any money left over is to be used in the course of its maintenance.

LABOUR PARTY'S MANIFESTO.

The British delegation has not yet been finally completed, but it is probable that Lord Cecil will be at its head.

Message to India.

Almost the first act of Sir Samuel Hoare, on taking over the post of Secretary of India in the New Government, has been to issue a message of goodwill to India.

In this, he describes his appointment, at this important moment in the history of the two countries, as the greatest event of his life. He recalls also that his two most interesting experiences were connected with India, on the occasion when he and Lady Maud were the first passengers to fly in a civil aeroplane from England to India, and his presence as a delegate at the Round Table Conference.

Regarding the problems the discussion of which will shortly be resumed Sir Samuel expresses the view that the truest friend to Great Britain and India is the man who faces the difficulties in a realistic spirit with the intention of mastering them.

Phrases Not Enough.

"For a solution of grave political problems, ideas and phrases are not enough. That is the spirit in which I shall approach the problem. With a realistic attitude, goodwill on both sides must be combined."

He concludes with a word of appreciation of the Services in India. Let them feel assured, he says, that we realize their difficulties and will not fail to support them in the loyal execution of their duties.—British Wireless and Reuter.

LADIES' TAILORS' DISPUTE.

ALLEGED ASSAULT IN A TEA SHOP.

INTIMIDATION ISSUE.

Trouble among certain employees of two foreign dressmakers led to charges of assault being brought before Mr. Williams at the Central Police Court this morning against two Shanghai Chinese who were alleged to have assaulted a third Shanghai man.

The defendants were also charged with having intimidated the complainant to cause him to leave the employment of Madame Chiffon.

Mr. J. B. Prior appeared for the prosecution on behalf of an employer in the service of Madame Chiffon, while Mr. Horace Lo represented the two defendants who, it is understood, are employed by Madame Backarragh.

Outlining his case, Mr. Prior said the assault took place on August 25, but the story opened on the day before. Both defendants were working for Madame Chiffon, the first being her head tailor. He owed his employers the sum of $132.26. At that time he was pretending to be sick. He had been late in delivering his work to the shop on this pretext. It was discovered that he was, in fact, working for another firm of dressmakers, while it was subsequently found that he had taken patterns from Madame Chiffon's to his other employers.

On August 24, Madame Chiffon thought he was taking things from the shop, and a police officer was summoned to the premises. The defendant was questioned and when asked if he wanted to return to Madame Chiffon he replied in the negative. It was then discovered where he was working.

The following day the complainant went to a tea shop and the two defendants entered with another man. The first defendant accused the complainant of having told Madame Chiffon that he was working for the other shop, and then told the other two men to assault the complainant. He himself took no actual part in the assault.

The tea house was full of Cantonese and when they saw the men start to fight they adopted a threatening attitude, whereupon the second defendant went out and blew a police whistle. The party was subsequently taken to the Police Station.

It was also alleged that when the two men set upon the complainant they told him that he was not to continue to work for Madame Chiffon.

After hearing the evidence for the prosecution, the case was adjourned until Monday.

Paris Conversations.

They lunched to-day with M. Flaudin, the French Minister of Finance, and other financial experts present included M. Pietri, the Minister of the Budget. M. Flaudin also had a long interview with Mr. Wiggin, the American chairman of the bankers' committee, which met at Basle recently.

The Bank of France is keeping in close touch with the Federal Reserve Bank in New York during the negotiations.—Reuter.

HAZY IDEAS ON TIME.

PUZZLE PROVIDED FOR INTERPRETER.

An itinerant seller of cloth, questioned in the Police Court this morning as to the length of time he deposited his goods on the road way and so caused a public obstruction, was very non-committal. "For as long as it would take to sip a cup of tea," he replied, ambiguously.

The interpreter (judiciously): How am I to know the size of your cup of tea? And besides, he added sagely, "the tea may be boiling hot."

Eventually, the culprit said that he left his goods there for five or six minutes.

The Magistrate (Mr. Schofield) was informed that the man had had two previous convictions, one for obstruction and one for crying his wares in a prohibited area. A fine of $3 was inflicted.

"TELEGRAPH" ART SUPPLEMENT.

To-Morrow's Picture Features.

There will again be many pictures of topical interest in to-morrow's issue of the "Telegraph" Art Supplement, including a pair of snapshots entered in our Bathing Beach Competition.

Sporting pictures will show groups in connexion with the visit of sportsmen from the Yuet Sai Club, Canton; the lawn bowls matches between Craigengower and Taikeo, and between the Police and the Small Units.

There will also be a group taken at the wedding of Dr. Duncan Fraser and Miss V. M. Crossworth, as well as another in connexion with the presentation to Dr. Minetti by the staff of the Bacteriological Institute, and one of members of the Hongkong City Chinese Bank Club's bathing picnic.

Other pictures will include some of the flanking floods of 1909, when considerable damage was done.

DRIVEN TO STEAL BY HUNGER.

YOUNG THIEF LENIENTLY TREATED.

The plan of a woman at West Point to include a chicken in the menu for the festivities of yesterday was frustrated by the untimely attentions of a thief, who snatched it from her young daughter as they were walking along Des Voeux Road West.

The thief who was caught by a detective, was charged before Mr. Schofield this morning. He said he was 17 years of age and had no relatives in this Colony, having arrived here from Kiangsu only two months ago. Hunger drove him to steal.

The prosecuting police officer corroborated the statement, and the Magistrate, dealing with the matter as a first offence, bound the lad over, at the same time granting a sum from the Poor Box to buy him a fare back to Kiangsu.

PRIMATE AND THE FREE CHURCHES.

METHODISTS AGREE TO "CONVERSATIONS."

The Wesleyan conference at Birmingham has agreed to give the Federal Council of Evangelical Free Churches authority to accept the Archbishop of Canterbury's invitation to appoint representatives of the Free Churches to meet Church of England representatives in renewal of previous conversations at Lambeth on the subject of reunion.

Dr. Scott Lidgett said the time for actual negotiations with the Church of England was not yet, but the Conference would desire to promote friendly conversations, which in the past had removed much misunderstanding.

The Archbishop, he added, was anxious not only to remove misunderstanding, but to open new ground in regard to practical co-operation.

Methodist Union. Union of the three great Methodist communities was made certain by the decisive vote of the Representatives Session of the Conference.

The majority in favour of bringing the Wesleyan Methodist, Primitive Methodist and United Methodist Churches into united conference next year represented 97.5 per cent. of the lay and ministerial delegates voting. All that now remains to comply with the terms of the Act enabling the union is to secure approval from a majority of at least three-fourths of the Pastoral Session. This is now a foregone conclusion.

The resolution successfully presented by the Rev. E. Alton French, secretary of the United Committee, was that the next yearly conference, to be held at Manchester in July, 1932, should, after the ordinary business adjourn until September 20, 1932, for a united meeting at the Royal Albert Hall.

Mr. French said that those who had opposed union recognised that it was now inevitable and that failure to carry the resolution would be an immeasurable disaster.

Sir Robert Perks, one of the prime movers of union, seconded the resolution, which was carried by 58 to 14.

"EAT ALL YOU WANT."

NEW YORK RESTAURANT GREAT SUCCESS.

New York, July 13. Recently a New York restaurant started its patrons by announcing "All you want to eat for sixty cents" (about 3s.).

The idea has spread until now nearly a score of restaurants are using the plan and report a 20 per cent. increase in profits.

A survey reveals that only 10 per cent. of the customers thoroughly overeat themselves, the remainder not eating more than they ordinarily would.

All the managers report instances of gluttony, some of them amazing, including a man who had tomato juice cocktail, three orders of liver and onions, two salads, four cups of coffee, pie, custards, watermelon, biscuits, and muffins, and a woman who ate steadily for an hour and a half and was unable to walk out of the restaurant.

It is found that visitors to New York eat most and find nothing unusual in the table d'hôte price, while New Yorkers first call a waitress to find whether there is a catch in the assurance that they can eat all they want, apparently unable to believe that it can be a paying proposition.

CLIFF-TOP SHOTS.

COUPLE WOUNDED BY ARMED MAN.

London, July 28.

A man was interviewed last night by the Douglas (Isle of Man) police in connexion with shots fired at Duncan Fleming (22), of Brighton-street, Govan, Glasgow, and Irene Livesey (21), of Ashfield-road, Rochdale, as they were sitting on the Marine Parade lido on Thursday night.

Mr. Fleming is in hospital in a grave condition suffering from gunshot wounds and other wounds believed to have been caused by a knife. The condition of the girl, who also has gunshot wounds, is satisfactory.

According to Miss Livesey she heard a shot and felt her left arm sting. As she jumped up a man attacked her and tried to throw her over the cliff. Fleming, although bleeding badly, sprang to her assistance, only to be met with another shot and also thrusts with a knife.

The man made off and the girl staggered more than a mile for help.

An Inspector on Marine Drive has reported that his double-barrelled gun has been stolen.

INFANTA BEATRIX.

BETROTHAL TO COUSIN.

Paris, July 21.

The news of the engagement of the Infanta Beatrix, elder daughter of ex-King Alfonso of Spain, to Prince Alvaro of Bourbon-Orleans, her cousin, and nephew of Queen Marie of Rumania, is confirmed here to-day.

Prince Alvaro has been studying at Zurich, and ex-King Alfonso stated several months ago that the engagement could not be announced until the Prince had finished his studies.

It is believed that the betrothal may hasten the engagement of the Infanta Cristina, the ex-Monarch's younger daughter, to Prince Aizono, Prince Alvaro's brother, so that it is possible a double wedding may take place.

Alfonso has provided dowries of approximately $28,000 for each of his daughters.

CINZANO

ITALIAN VERMOUTH

is made with the finest Italian White Wine. It is very wholesome—It is not a Liqueur.

Some ways of using it:

PLAIN: It's not too sweet and not too dry.

IN ALL COCKTAILS, where Vermouth is used.

AS A LONG DRINK IN SUMMER: with mineral water.

The Perfect Cocktail

"GIN & CIN"

1 DRY GIN, 1 CINZANO VERMOUTH, A SQUEEZE OF LEMON

WHAT ABOUT "IT"?

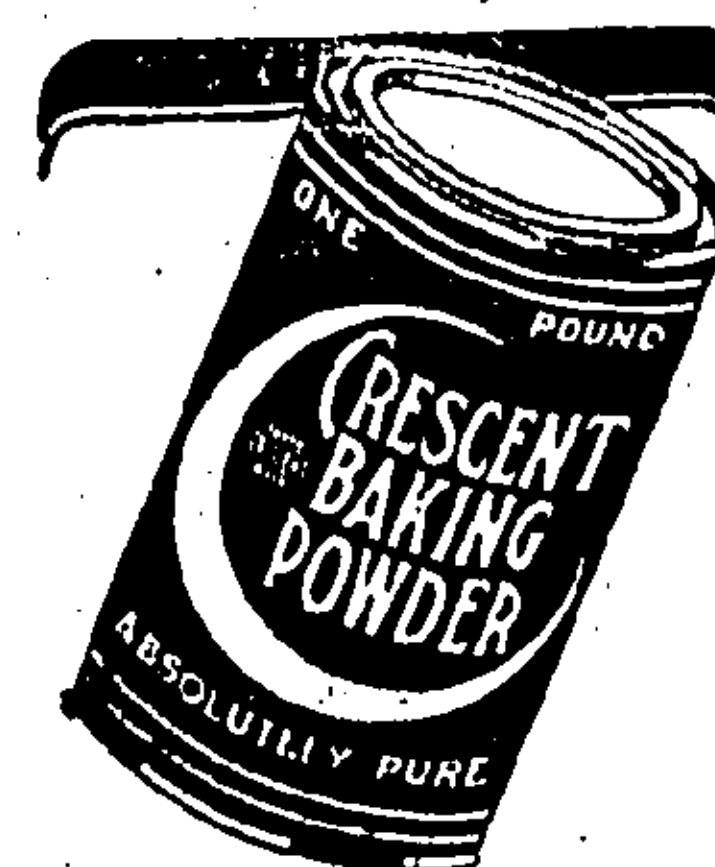

Will you have a "Gin and It"?
The knowing man says: Oh no!
I'd rather have a Gin and Cin.
The "It" is then "Cinzano."

"CINZANO" stands for quality.

Quality is equal to "CINZANO."

In one you have both!

Obtainable from All Wine Merchants.

ENGLISH LEAGUES TO-MORROW.

FULL PROGRAMME.

To-morrow will herald the opening of the English Association Football season of 1931-32, when a full programme of matches will be decided in the four English leagues.

The Arsenal, holders of the championship open before their supporters with a most interesting fixture, entertaining West Bromwich Albion, who last year won both the English Cup, and promotion to the First League.
Everton, the other promoted club,
is at home to Birmingham.
Finalists with West Bromwich in the Cup last season.

Two new laws come into operation. A goalkeeper, while in possession of the ball, is permitted to take four steps instead of two; and instead of a free-kick for a wrong throw-in, the throw reverts to the other side.

The complete schedule of matches in the four English leagues, and the Scottish First League is appended:—

GOLF

How can one play an intentional hook?

An intentional hooked ball is the mark of a good player. Such a shot is often needed to avoid trouble.

It will benefit an habitual slicer to learn how to hook a ball, for it can often be used as a remedy for a bad slice.

In hooking the right hand should be under the shaft and the left well over. It is necessary to draw the right foot back to enable the golfer to hit out and across the line of flight. If the hook is too sharp advance the right foot a bit. —ART KRENZ.

YOUNG GERMAN'S ESCAPE.

HAD "A LITTLE BEER TOO MUCH."

Charges of assaulting one of the motor boat attendants at Blake
Pier and of using profane language at the Central Police Station were brought against F.
Woudrew, a young German, before
Mr. Williams at the Central Magistracy this morning.

The defendant, who spoke in broken English, said he could not remember what had happened as he had had a "little beer too much." When asked if he had assaulted the complainant, he remarked that he thought he had seen the man before, but could not remember if he had assaulted him.

Inspector Shaftain said the defendant was employed by a German firm in Hongkong and lived in Kowloon. Shortly before 2 o'clock this morning he went to Blake Pier and endeavoured to hire a motor boat. He had no money on him and wanted to sign a chit, but the boat attendant refused. He was assaulted by the defendant.

After some difficulty, the man was taken to the Police Station.
In the charge room he used profane language and was generally disorderly, keeping about 100 people awake all night. He had had some drink, but could not be described as being drunk.

On the first charge the defendant was fined $5 with a fine of $10 on the second.

SPEEDBOAT SINKS DURING RACE.

MISS CARSTAIRS FLUNG INTO THE SEA.

Southampton, July 24.
Crowds watching the motorboat week events on Southampton Water to-night were alarmed to see Miss Betty Carstairs thrown out of her new speed boat New-II, which suddenly plunged under the water and sank.

Miss Carstairs swam until picked up by a rescue boat, and her mechanic, Joe Harris, also escaped. The boat was later salvaged and towed ashore.

The mishap occurred during the second of the series of three races for the Detroit trophy.
Whyteleaf III. (Mr. A. F. White)
and Miss Britain I. (Mr. H. Scott-Faine) were leading Miss "Carstairs" boat in the fourth lap when New II, apparently struck the wash of a passing steamer. The boat, which was travelling at over 40 knots, heeled over, and as it did so Miss Carstairs and Mr. Harris, who were both wearing lifebelts,
were thrown clear.

The Rescue.

The boat shipped water as it skipped along the surface on its side and quickly filled. After turning over and floating upside down for a few seconds it sank by the stern.

The crew of a Royal Air Force pinnace tried to get a line round the sinking craft but it plunged to the bottom before it could be fixed.

FORGED NOTES CASE.

first defendant came to the printing shop to visit his cousin, who happened to be the accountant. It appears that he came to visit him on the eleventh and slept there for two nights. On the 14th the complainant was introduced to the first defendant by another member of the staff—a reporter of the newspaper, and the three of them went out to a tea shop together.

"This was the first of a series of meetings at tea shops and on July 22, the first defendant said to the complainant 'I know a man who has a supply of forged $10 notes of the Hongkong Bank for sale, would you like to buy them?'

"I don't know exactly what the reply was, but it was not entirely in the negative because next day the first defendant came to invite the complainant out again to a tea shop. They went to the Wellington Cafe, I think it was, and when they were there the first defendant produced two bank notes and said that these were forged notes.

Genuine Notes.

"The complainant said they looked very good and the first defendant replied that they were excellent and the only thing was that they were rather bigger than the genuine and he produced a third note which appeared to be rather smaller. The theory of the prosecution is that these notes were all genuine and one note had simply been made smaller by paring round the edge. It is inconceivable that a clever forger should fail to get the external measurements of the note right.

"I don't rely on that because that is immaterial to the case, but I mention it because it might make things clearer. I want to show that this was not a case of showing forged notes but of showing genuine notes and pretending they were forged, which is the reverse of the usual fraud.

"The first defendant told the complainant that he could take these two notes home in order that he might examine them, but he insisted on getting a deposit of $40 as a surety for their safe return. That also was an indication that the notes were genuine, because it was a big deposit to pay if they were forgeries. That $40 was paid back later.

Money for Business.

"The complainant did take the notes away and it was arranged that he was to let the first defendant know on the following day how many notes he would take, and he was also told that for $7,000 he would receive forged notes to the value of $10,000. The complainant went away to his father-in-law and asked for a loan of $7,000 for business purposes. He did not get the money then and there, but evidently the father-in-law entertained the idea of giving him an advance for business purposes.

"On the following day (July 24) the first defendant telephoned the complainant and asked him to come to the Sing Hotel to discuss business. He went there and found the first defendant and also a man named Pang who was introduced to him as a broker of forged notes. They discussed the matter further and it was arranged that complainant would get the $7,000 and would go at 5 p.m. to 17, Aberdeen Street, ground floor.

"At about 4.30 the complainant went round to his father-in-law to get the $7,000 and arrived at 17, Aberdeen Street at about 5. There he again met the first defendant and the man Pang, the so-called broker. The three of them went from there to 6, Ching Road. They were shown into a sitting room on the ground floor. They waited there for some minutes and then a European came in, whom I think, I will be able to prove was Guilherme Guimaraes, and whom I think, I shall be able to prove was the brother of the second defendant.

Brother "Arrested."

"He came into the room and with him was a Chinese who did the interpretation and whom I shall call the interpreter. The complainant was asked through the interpreter if he had brought the money and he said that he had. He was asked to produce it. He produced the $7,000 which was in $500 notes. He produced these and handed them over to the first defendant, who extracted three notes ($1,500) and handed the remainder to Guilherme Guimaraes who in turn handed them to the Chinese interpreter. He also handed to the Chinese a slip of paper which he said was a delivery order for the forged notes. It was said that the forged notes were in storage and that he would have to go away to get the notes. I think he said they were in cold storage at the Dairy Farm. (Laughter).

"The Chinese went away and the rest remained seated, waiting for the Chinese to come back. After a short time the second defendant came into the room and said, 'I am a Police Inspector,' and going up to his brother he said, 'I am going to arrest you for selling forged notes.' He took hold of his brother and led him out of his room. That left the complainant, the first defendant and Pang together. After they had gone Pang and the first defendant and complainant left because they said, 'We had better run away or we will be in trouble too.'

Complainant Suspicious.

"They then left the room and went to a tea shop. They stayed there until about 6 p.m. when this man, Pang, said he would have to go and he did go. The complainant became rather suspicious by this time and asked the first defendant for his $1,500 which the first defendant had extracted from the $7,000 earlier in the afternoon. The man at first remonstrated but in the end handed the money back. But the complainant was still suspicious of him and would not let him out of his sight and he insisted on his going to a Hotel where he stayed in the same room together that night. The next morning he took him to the Police Station.

"The Police tried to find the two Portuguese, Guilherme and Leo Guimaraes, but they could not find them. The second defendant was traced to the R.E. Stores in Queen's Road East, where he was working. He was arrested there on the evening of the 25th.

"With regard to statements the two defendants made when charged, the first defendant's statement was to the effect that he also was the dupe of the two Europeans and the second defendant simply asserted ignorance of the whole matter.

Points in Evidence.

"There are just one or two little points of evidence that I may mention, particularly as particulars are being asked for by my friends. There is some evidence which has a bearing on the case. With regard to the second defendant, I have a witness here from the National City Bank of New York and he will produce an extract from the account book of the bank which I think will show that the day after the alleged fraud quite a large sum of money was paid into the second defendant's account.

"This witness, of course, had to be subpoenaed because the Bank, very rightly and very naturally, will not give information of this kind unless they have an order of the Court to do so but that has been done and an officer of the National City Bank has been subpoenaed. I think the statement which he will produce will show that a fairly large sum was paid into his account by the second defendant.

"I have a military officer here who will say that, on July 22, just two days before the complainant had lost his money the second defendant had given a month's notice. He was working in the R.E. Stores as a clerk and he gave notice which shows that he contemplated leaving his employment there. I don't know what the sum is that was paid into the Bank but I think it was somewhere about $2,000 and I think the Army officer I have referred to will say that the second defendant was getting from the Army not more than $80 per month salary. I am just mentioning that because I am anxious to give all the details I am going to prove in evidence.

Complainant's Character.

"It is no use my trying to whitewash the character of the complainant. This is one of those cases where it is possible he might have found himself in the dock. Still, Your Worship, it is always to be remembered that the case I have outlined discloses, if the facts are true, a completed fraud and after all the complainant had never got further than a contemplated fraud, that is defrauding people who might buy these notes. I submit the right person—it is a choice of one or another—who should be prosecuted are the first and second defendants.

FORGED NOTES CASE.

Mr. d'Almeida: Is that the whole of your opening?

Mr. Whyte Smith: Yes.

Mr. d'Almeida (to his Worship): I am still at a loss with reference to charge "C" especially as regards the second defendant. I see nothing whatever to connect him with charge "C" with regard to anything which took place between the 12th and 24th July.

Mr. Lo: Also in regard to my client my friend has not mentioned anything to show that he has induced anybody to part with their money between 12th and 24th July. I ask your Worship to make a note.

His Worship: The charges will stand but I have noted your objection.

Mr. J. Almeida, clerk at the Money Order Office, subpoenaed, identified the photograph of the missing man as that of Guilherme Guimaraes, brother of the second defendant. He knew that they lived at No. 6, Caine Road.

Mr. Lai Shiu-chau, clerk at the National City Bank of New York, produced an extract from the Bank's books, showing that on July 25 an account was opened by a Mr. Leonardo Guimaraes with a deposit in cash of $2,000. There was a withdrawal the same day by cheque of $1,000.

Wong To-po, the complainant, then went into the witness-box, where he gave testimony bearing out Mr. Whyte-Smith's opening statement.

He said that the first defendant, Kong Sze-yik, was first introduced to him by a reporter of the Tung Wan Yat Po. That first meeting, on July 11 was followed by other conversations, leading up to an interview at the Wellington Cafe, where Kong Sze-yik showed him two allegedly forged notes, so perfectly printed it appeared to him that there was no difference when compared with a genuine $10 note. By folding the two different notes, Kong convinced him that there was, at any rate, one half, this being one-tenth of an inch's difference in the printed or coloured areas.

Witness went on to relate how he managed to borrow $7,000 from his father-in-law after telling the latter that the money was for "business purposes," and with this money went to the Caine Road address. Incidentally, he was introduced to an individual of foreign aspect, who, Kong confided to him, "was a regular broker in such goods and had been putting through deals amounting to hundreds of thousands of dollars." Since this "Mr. Pang" for as such the foreigner was introduced, was making his living out of it, he was to be thoroughly trusted—this after witness had expressed certain misgivings. Coming to the "deal" at the Caine Road address, witness described in detail what happened, declaring that in the individual who came into the room unexpectedly and announced he was a detective inspector, he re-

OBITUARY.

DEATH OF DOCTOR JOHN FENTON.

It is with regret that we have to announce the death, which occurred suddenly on Wednesday night, at "Derrington", 8, Bowen Road, of Dr. John Fenton, in his 71st year. The late Dr. Fenton was born in London and received his early education in a Jesuit College in France. Later he went to South Africa, and joined the Witwatersrand University as a lecturer in English.

He saw military service during the South African War, attaining the rank of Major in the British forces.

The outbreak of the Great War saw him back in England as an Inspector of Explosives. In 1919 he came to Hongkong as lecturer in English and French at the Hongkong University. During his stay at the University, up to 1928, he endeared himself to his pupils by his kindly and genial disposition and above all his gentlemanly bearing. On leaving the University he joined the Govern-

TYKES WIND UP WITH VICTORY.

VERITY IN CAPITAL FORM.

LANCS. RECOVERY.

London, Aug. 27.
Yorkshire won their last match in the county championship by nine wickets, the champions thus obtaining a total of 287, forty-six better than is possible to Gloucester even if they win their remaining games.

Sussex were Yorkshire's victims to-day. The Southern county could do nothing with the bowling of Verity, and were dismissed for 106 and 165. Verity took 6 for 52 in their first innings and 7 for 93 in their second.

Yorkshire obtained a lead of 42 on the first innings, scoring 148. (Lancashire, 6 for 59) and then made 124 for 1.

Splendid Bowling.

Lancashire also won their final match. In one sense it was their best performance of the season. Over a hundred runs in arrears against Derby on the first innings, they won finally by three wickets, thanks to some splendid bowling by Dick Tyldesley.

Derby took first knock and hit up 173. Lancashire were sent back for 66, Slater taking 5 wickets for 22 runs.

It was then Derby's turn to collapse. Tyldesley took 6 wickets for 21 runs and the last fell at 65. Needing 173 to win, Lancashire scored 176 for 7 wickets. Reuter.

A CLASSIC FILM.

HONOUR AMONG LOVERS.

One of the most effective pictures shown in Hongkong for some considerable time past is "Honour Among Lovers," at the Central Theatre. Produced by Miss Dorothy Arzner, it is recommended as offering splendid acting and wonderful photography, allied to an interesting story.

The film was shown in London a month ago and was warmly praised by Mr. E. V. Lucas in Punch, who wrote:—"Put Claudette Colbert into a sympathetic part and I sink back in contentment, for she has everything most to be valued in a movie star and seldom found in such profusion together: beauty, charm, dignity and a caressing voice. She is also actress enough to persuade me that: as the perfect private secretary on dangerous Christian-name terms with her employer, she could at once have served him faithfully and kept him in his place, although I felt all the while that she ought to have fallen for such an attractive millionaire-magnate as Mr. Frederic March makes him."

Most people will thoroughly agree with Mr. Lucas. Frederic March plays his part as the "descendant of a long line of bachelors" with great success, and a wealth of quiet humour is provided by Mr. Charles Ruggles.

Mr. Monroe Owsley in the only unsympathetic part, is to be credited with a distinct achievement.

FLOOD RELIEF SOUABBLE.

OBJECTION TO U.S. LOAN.

Shanghai, Aug. 28.
A difference of opinion between the Finance Ministry and Legislative Council officials regarding the organisation of flood relief in Central China has led to the issuing of a frank statement by Mr. T. V. Soong criticising the Legislative Council for proposing the issue by the Nanking Government of $80,000,000 in bonds.

Mr. Soong says the Legislative Council has explicitly indicated its disapproval of the Finance Ministry's recommendation for the negotiation of a wheat loan with U. S. financiers. This is confirmed by the Legislative Council's suggestion for the creation of a Board of Trustees to supervise and administer a loan of $80,000,000 from Chinese banks, and not from foreign sources.

The Finance Minister says he intends to issue $10,000,000 in Treasury Bonds and meanwhile to proceed with the negotiations with U. S. financiers for the wheat loan.

Despite Mr. Soong's disapproval, the Legislative Council has submitted its recommendation to the National Government Council which will meet to-day to give its final decision.

Among donations received by the Government is one from the former Manchukuo Emperor who has contributed to the flood relief funds his Tientsin residence, which is estimated to be worth $52,000.

Chinese bankers here have promised to contribute $1,000,000, and the money will be forwarded to Mr. T. V. Soong next week. Reuter.

U.S. SECRETARY OF WAR.

COL. J. P. HURLEY DUE TO-MORROW.

BOUND FOR MANILA.

Colonel P. J. Hurley, the American Secretary of War, is expected to arrive in Hongkong to-morrow on the s.s. President Cleveland. He is on his way to the Philippine Islands and is accompanied by Mrs. Hurley and his Aide-de-Camp, Major Bishop of the United States Army. Colonel Maxwell Murray, United States Army, and Mrs. Murray are also members of the party.

It is understood that the Secretary is proceeding to the Philippines to study the economic and political situation in the islands. He will probably remain several weeks and visit Iloilo, Zamboanga, and other important places. As head of the War Department at Washington the Secretary is responsible under the President for the administration of the Government of the Philippines and is the immediate superior of Governor General Davis.

Although not a professional soldier, Colonel Hurley takes a deep interest in military affairs and has seen active service with the American Army. He was a Captain in the Oklahoma National Guard and became a Major in the United States Army during the World War. He participated in the Alsace-Marne, Meuse-Argonne and St. Mihiel operations of the American Expeditionary Forces when he received the American Distinguished Service Medal. He is now a Colonel in the United States Army (Reserve Corps). President Hoover appointed Colonel Hurley to be Secretary of War in 1920. As such he is a member of the Cabinet and the fifth ranking official on the United States Government.

Upon his arrival, Secretary Hurley will be met at the steamer by Consul General Jenkins, Commander of the U.S.S. Helena. While in Hongkong, Colonel and Mrs. Hurley will be the guests of the American Consul General and Mrs. Jenkins.

NEW COMMERCIAL TREATY.

Budapest, Aug. 27.
Negotiations for a new commercial treaty between France and Hungary were concluded to-day, when the agreement was initiated.

It provides for preferential treatment for Hungarian wheat in the French market, while Hungary grants certain tariff reductions to France, based on the most-favoured nation clause. Reuter.
